Louisville, Ky., August 2.—In a statement given out here tonight General Percy Haley says that J. C. W.
Beckham carried eight out of the eleven Congressional districts, winning the nomination for the long term Senatorship over Hon. A. O. Stanley from an 8,000 to 10,000 majority. The vote in the county precincts, General Haley said, was about forty per cent of the normal and in the cities about seventy-five per cent.

According to General Haley, Beckham carried ninety-one out of the 120 counties, McCreary, four, and Stanley the remainder.

Senator Johnson N. Camden has been nominated for the short term by a majority over both his competitors so large that the race was lost sight of in the closer fight between Beckham and Stanley. He received in many counties of the State almost the solid Democratic vote, his opponents showing strength only in their home district and General Young lost his to Mr. Caden by a small majority.

WAR SWEEPS ALL EUROPE

Russia Invades Germany—Germany Invades France—
England in the Fray

TITANI: CONTEST IN WHICH IS SEEN
THE HAND OF GOD

London, England, August 2.—Germany, having invaded France, it is felt in London that the time for action on the part of England has arrived.

There is reason to believe that at the cabinet meeting today preparations were completed for such instant action as the circumstances may demand.

The naval reservists were called out at 4:30 this afternoon. This action confirms the belief that the British Government is ready to take its part in the struggle.

Close observers in London could not fail to be impressed with the fact that something tremendous was happening.
Short of actual mobilization the government is taking all necessary steps to meet a situation unprecedented in the nation's history.

Russians Invade Germany.
Berlin, Germany, August 2.—A Russian column, with artillery, has crossed the German frontier at Schwinden, southeast of Bialla.

Two squadrons of Russian cossacks are riding in the direction of Johannesburg, in East Prussia, fifteen miles from the frontier.

London, England, August 2.—Four great powers of Europe, Austria, Russia, France and Germany, are now engaged in actual warfare, but two of them—Germany and France—have not only not declared war as far as is known here, but have not even severed diplomatic relations. This is despite the fact that Germany's ultimatum to France has either been ignored or rejected.

The explanation of this would appear to be that Germany and France are each seeking to throw upon the other the onus of beginning the war. In fact, while the nations of Europe are flying at each others' throats, they are vying with each other in protesting their desires to maintain peace and they repudiate the responsibility for plunging the whole continent into fighting.

In this curious situation France, according to British opinion has the strongest justification. She certainly was the last to mobilize and seems to have taken the greatest precautions to avoid frontier collisions.

Germany Invades France.
London, England, August 2.—The German invasion of France has begun, according to authentic information received in London today, without, so far as is known, a declaration of war having been made.

GARDEN PARTY

En Fete, To Be Given Wednesday Evening by the First District Parent-Teacher Association.

On Wednesday evening, August 5, the Parent-Teachers' Association of the First District will give a garden fete at the residence of Mrs. George Barbour on Wall street from 8 to 10:30. A variety of delicious sandwiches will be served and coffee made after the perfection recipe which demands that it shall be as strong as love, as black as hate and as hot as—well as our Ohio Valley brands of summer.

A candy table will be presided over by some attractive young ladies. And there will be music and the moon. Do not resist their combination, but come early, stay late and bring the family and the stranger within the gates. Proceeds to be devoted to wiping out of the entire debt for the lighting of the school. If there is a surplus it will be reserved as a nucleus for a school library fund.

MRS. A. P. ABBOTT'S FUNERAL

The remains of Mrs. Nannie Thompson Abbott arrived from Marietta, Ga., Saturday night over the L. & N., accompanied by her husband and father and mother, and were taken to the Thompson home in East Third street.

Funeral services at the home this afternoon at 2 o'clock in charge of Pastor
A. F. Stahl of the Christian Church, Burial in the Maysville Cemetery.

The sudden death of Mrs. Abbott has cast a shadow where once all was radiant sunshine.

MRS. WOODWARD HONORED

New England Selects a Teacher South of the Mason and Dixon Line.

The many friends of Mrs. Isaac Woodward in this city and county, will be glad to hear of her successful career in the East.

Mrs. Elizabeth Woodward, the widow of the late Isaac Woodward, matriculated in Columbia University shortly after the death of her husband about two years ago.

Last week the president of the State Normal School of Massachusetts went down to the University to select a head for the Department of Education in his school. After interviewing both men and women from all over the United States, he selected Mrs. Woodward.

The Faculty of the University is very much pleased over the fact that a Southern woman was chosen. It is not only evidence that all prejudice between the North and South is forgotten, but that in the land of the Puritans, Southern women are coping with Northern men and when brain is pitted against brain, the woman wins.

Maysville has cause to be proud of the recognition given to three of her women who have graduated from Columbia within the last few years.

Miss Phoebe Waller, daughter of Dr.
Maurice Waller of this city, is now teacher of English in the New York City schools at a salary that few educators in Kentucky ever get.

Miss Daisy Greenwood, formerly teacher in the Maysville High School, is Social Director in the largest dormitory of Columbia, and Mrs. Woodward goes to quaint old Plymouth, the head of the department in the State Normal.

Mrs. Woodward, we take our hat off to you and are willing to offer you as a sample of Kentucky womanhood.

A TWELVE POUND BOY.

Born, yesterday, to the wife of Mr.
William Dargarell of the East End, a 12-pound boy.

Among the thousands of marooned American tourists now in Europe, are Miss Susie Armstrong, sister of Mrs.
J. B. Russell, and Miss Hilda Threlkeld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Threlkeld of this city.

$50,000 DAMAGE SUIT

Filed Against C. & O. Railroad
Co. By the Equitable Trust
Co. of Dover For Causing Death of Alonzo Williams

The Equitable Trust Company of Dover, as administrator of Alonzo Williams, deceased, filed suit in Mason Circuit Court for $50,000 damages against the C. & O. Railroad.

In February, 1914, while crossing the track of the C. & O. at a public crossing near the depot at South Ripley, Alonzo Williams, was by the alleged carelessness and negligence of the C. & O. Railroad Company and its employees,
John Mann, engineer, and Frank P.
Fish, conductor, who were in charge thereof, run over and killed by one of the C. & O.'s passenger trains going west.

Wherefore the plaintiff prays for a judgment against the defendants in the sum of $50,000 and for costs and all proper relief.

MOONLIGHT SCHOOLS IN HARDIN.

Hardin County is in the midst of a great educational revival. A week's campaign, with speaking in every school house, has been waged, and Moonlight Schools are to be opened soon, fifty teachers having volunteered to teach them, following an eloquent address and appeal by Mr. Harry A. Sommers. The Hardin County Board of Education has the distinction of being the first in the State to offer a prize to the teacher who teaches the largest number of illiterates. The Woman's Club of Elizabethtown offers the same amount for same purpose, and is the first Woman's Club in the State to offer such a prize. Supt. Payne, of Hardin County, the Hardin County Board of Education, Hardin County Public School Teachers, the Woman's Club of Elizabethtown and Col. Harry A. Sommers and The Elizabethtown News are all banded together to wipe illiteracy out of Hardin. It has not a chance to exist in that county.

UNCLE SAM WILL KEEP HANDS OFF DURING BIG RUMPUSS.

The United States will not at this time tender its good offices to preserve peace in Europe. President Wilson has so stated, explaining that so far this Government lacks a "key" to the situation abroad. The United States is too remote and official information is too meager, it appears, for the President to believe it wise for the United States to become involved in any way in the quarrel.

The President said that no tender of peaceful offices had been made, and indicated that the Administration has no such purpose in mind at the present time.

The President said also that a proclamation of neutrality would not be issued as a result of the official notification by Austria that that country is at war with Serbia. Until other nations become involved the proclamation of neutrality is not regarded as necessary.

The Panama Canal, which will be open to commerce in another two weeks, is destined at the outset to become a strategic highway of the world if the present hostilities between Austria-Hungary and Serbia develop into a general conflict involving the other great European Powers.

EMPLOYERS' COMPENSATION!

If a workman is injured by machinery in the factory where he is employed, the employer is required to compensate him financially for his injury. The employee having been deprived of his earning capacity, undergoes financial loss, and is compensated therefor. On the other hand, if an employer is financially injured by a workman, he receives no compensation whatever.

Why not an Employers' compensation Act, which would repay an employer's loss caused by the deliberate misbehavior of an employee? Obvious defects have unquestionably developed in the operation of many Workmen's Compensation Acts, and such a law might serve to equalize matters a little.

A case in point occurred in a furniture establishment in Astoria, L. I., not long ago. A workman in the plant, employed to operate a machine situated on the first floor of the building, helped himself to a mahogany plank (property of the employer) and took it to a machine on the second floor of the factory, in order that he might work it into a cabinet for his own use. While so doing he was seriously injured.

The culprit in this case is obviously the employer, at least he is so considered under the law. He will be required to pay compensation to a workman who stole material and was injured while working it on a machine which he had no authority to touch. The employer has no appeal; he must reach for his pocket book and question not.

Every now and then the sublime wisdom of legislators breaks down, and usually they are able to successfully dodge the blame; certainly the culpability in this instance has been shouldered onto an innocent man.—American Industries.

VALUABLE CATTLE.

A Marion county man sold eighteen head of cattle the other day for $2,054.25. In other words the cattle weighed 24,900 pounds and were sold at 8 1/4 cents a pound. This is said to have been the best and highest priced bunch of cattle ever sold in the county. They were purchased by Monte Fox, of Danville, and were shipped to New York. And yet there are some farmers in Kentucky who are not able to see where cattle raising pays and there are hundreds of farmers who make no especial effort in that way. Cattle are scarce and becoming scarcer. The receipts at Kansas City so far this year are 150,000 below the receipts during the same period last year. Even a blind farmer ought to be able to see that there are splendid prospects for increasing farm prosperity by developing the cattle growing industry.

NEWSPAPERS AND WARS.

"A big European war will be a fine thing for the newspapers," said the Philadelphia manager of a large electrical company.

"In what way?" I inquired. "Help you to sell papers," was his reply.

Alas! Others may see your ointment, but you alone can observe the fly swimming around it. The ink is scarcely dry upon the printed testimony of one newspaper manager to the effect that the Spanish-American War had cost his publication a tidy three-quarters of a million net.

The editor of the London Post told me his paper had 20 correspondents in the Boer War and cable rates were then $1.20 a word from Cape Town. That African conquest was the biggest menace to newspaper dividends which London has experienced in a generation.

I saw dispatches come from Manila during our insurrection there which cost $3,000 a column. That included the price paid the special correspondent for sending one article.

Yes. A convention of newspaper proprietors would as quickly endorse a great war for their own money-making purposes as a farmers' grange would vote to employ a pack of wolves to guard their sheep.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SAFETY FIRST AND ALWAYS.

The movement for greater safety in the operation of automobiles is becoming general. The rapid multiplication of motor-driven vehicles has increased vastly the number of disasters and casualties. Monday morning newspapers teem with accounts of the slain and injured, a silent tribute to the transformation of the day of peace into a day of carnage.

The Safety First Society of New York City has issued a card, which it is giving wide distribution, and which it would be well for every motor car driver and owner to memorize. Here are its salutary injunctions:

MOTORISTS.

Carefulness First Means Safety Always.

1. Be Considerate.
2. Go Slow.
 - Passing children,
 - Passing vehicles,
 - Around corners,
 - Approaching crossings.
3. Stop.
 - At railroad crossings,
 - Behind street cars taking on or discharging passengers.
4. Use tire chains on wet and slippery pavements. Better be safe than sorry.

It is time the carnage of the motor vehicle be greatly lessened, even though it cannot be entirely eliminated. Many accidents are not the fault of drivers, but of awkward, unthinking or careless pedestrians. The death and injury list, however, will be greatly minimized with the exercise of greater precaution on the part of the drivers.

WHAT A GENTLEMAN IS.

An exact definition of a gentleman has been tried many times, never perhaps with entire satisfactory results. Little Sadie had never heard any of the definitions, but she managed to throw a gleam of light on the subject. The word was in the spelling lesson, and the teacher said:

"Sadie, what is a gentleman?"
"Please n'a'am," she answered, "a gentleman's a man you don't know very well."

Four persons were killed when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad passenger train at Renfrew, Pa.

PRIZES FOR TOBACCO

Will Make a Lively Contest at the Louisville State Fair—Mason County Should Be Well Represented

The prospects of holding a splendid Tobacco Show at the Kentucky State Fair were never better. Those in charge of this Department have been encouraged by reason of the fact that quite a lot of tobacco has been topped during the past ten days. This should give it plenty of time to thoroughly mature and be ready for exhibit by the 14th of September. The exhibit of old tobacco has always been a good one but the new exhibit has always been deficient in quantity. There is nothing that will advertise your State and County more than a good tobacco show, and the Superintendent of the Tobacco Department of the State Fair, Mr. Evan S. Rees, of Springfield, Ky., stands ready at all times to advise with the farmers of the State relative to making entry and exhibit.

It was all over with so quickly I could scarcely realize what had actually occurred. Then I laughed and swore, my nerves dancing like so many demons. They were gone—gone! Those merciless red devils, those accursed murderers, those fiends in human guise. Nor was it likely they would stop in their mad flight until they dropped from sheer exhaustion, or the dawn of another day brought with it fresh courage.

And those others, who were yet there—Brady, tied still to the stake, the flames already licking the fagots at his feet, and mademoiselle praying to the Virgin—what would they think? Would they know, understand, what had really occurred, or had the terrible spectacle left them also in benumbed terror? The thought awoke me as from a stupor, and I turned about. The ground was a jumble of things, as if I looked upon a battle field, yet this was not what I really saw in that first swift glance. A man—a white man—ran leaping across the flame-lit opening, kicking aside the blazing fagots of wood already scorched Brady, hurling them to right and left in frantic haste, until he made passage through.

He caught the glimmer of a knife in his hand; and then, by main strength, he dragged the weakened prisoner clear of the burning wood, and dropped him exhausted on the ground. As the fellow stood erect, staring about him, at the helpless huddle at his feet, at the white face of the girl, at the debris on every side, I recognized Simon Girty.

"Saints alive! What does all this mean?" he cried, grabbing up the gun dropped in his first swift effort at rescue. "You 'Running Water'! ay! and this is the Kentuckian who has killed me. What's happened here? It looks like a shambles. Never before did I see a man burning himself. Who killed these—merciful God! What is that?"

His voice rose into a shriek as he stared at me, while I advanced toward him. With one terrified leap he sprang back, throwing up his rifle, but with hands shaking so, that I laughed outright. The sound coming unexpectedly from such ghastly lips must have been more horrible than a groan, for the frightened man dashed his weapon to the ground, and turned to run. His foot struck Brady's body and he went down, scrambling to his knees. I saw the old scout's head uplifted, the trembling girl bury her face in her hands, as if to shut out the sight.

"Don't run; there is nothing to be afraid of!" I cried hastily, stopping still in my tracks to better reassure them. "I am no ghost, but a friend. Hear me, mademoiselle!"

CHAPTER XXI.

Through the Black Night.

She dropped her hands from before her eyes, and, holding out the white cross gleaming in the firelight, came slowly forward. A yard from me she stopped, hesitating, not even yet thoroughly convinced of my identity.

"Is—it really you, Joseph Hayward?" her lips faltered. "Tell me, I beg you, for—I was never so frightened in my life."

"There is nothing for you to fear, mademoiselle," I said quickly, regretful enough to have startled her so. "I am Joseph Hayward, the American."

"What is it, Brady?"

"There was a faint muttering, but I distinguished the words."

"Was—that—Simon Girty?"

"Yes."

"The—the man—who, who—cut me down?"

"Yes."

"What—what is he now?"

"Right here; you want to speak to him—oh, Girty?"

The renegade came toward us, and the eyes of the two borderers met. For a long moment they looked at each other, a memory, no doubt, flashing between them. Then Brady held out a blackened hand.

"I've saved my life, Simon Girty," he said with an effort. "I—I never thought to—shake hands with you—but—but I'm a goin' to."

Girty's ugly face broke into a smile.

"No more did I," he admitted grimly. "We ain't generally been in no shakin' hands mood when we've met heretofore. Still, I reckon, we're met even up an' kin afford to shake it if we want. Think yer kin travel a bit, Brady?"

"How far?"

"To the foot of the lake; to a Wyandot camp."

The hunter's eyes wandered from his face to mine.

"I—I reckon I can," he mumbled at last. "I—ain't hurt so much, only bruised up." His glance fell upon his feet. "Maybe if I had some whole moccasins I'd get along better."

"We'll fix that," and Girty laughed. "I reckon that's what them dead Indians is lying there for."

He stepped across to the nearest body, fumbled a moment, and came back, dropping on his knees. Deftly and quickly he cut the burned leather from the wounded man's feet, touching the blackened flesh gingerly with his fingers, and slipped on the new moccasins.

"You're not scorched much, friend. Hurts some, I reckon, but a couple o' days will put you all right agin."

As I pen these adventures of youth I seem to retain but dim recollection of what occurred following our arrival at the camp at the foot of the lake. I recall the struggle we had with Brady, which taxed Girty's strength as well as my own. The man suffered greatly, and for much of the distance we bore him in our arms in spite of his protests. Yet we reached the spot at last, and stumbled into the circle of light cast by a small fire, the Indians aroused from sleep by Girty's shout, and clustering about us in eager curout into fuller view. "Do you know me now?"

He stared, uncertain, into my clay-streaked face, his eyes narrowed into mere slits.

"Maybe I do, an' maybe I don't," he admitted at last obstinately. "Yer're like the lad who guided me into Har-mar, but yer a sight for all that. If yer had yer face washed, an' more hair showin' I could judge better. What's all this play-actin' about anyhow? Though 't wasn't much play in it for me, I reckon," pointing to Brady, "when I got here. A minute afore, an' the man would have been sheeted in flame."

I stepped toward him, amused to see the man shrink back, half startled still at my wild decoration, and dropped a hand heavily on his shoulder.

"Does that feel like the grip of a phantom, you fool?" I asked sharply. "If it does I'll shut down tighter still for your benefit. My tale can wait its telling until we be well out of here. There will be time enough then to satisfy your curiosity. Those fellows may get over their fright and come back."

"What fellows?"

"A mixed band of Miami, Ojibwas and Shawnees—mostly Shawnees with a chief named Sis-e-to-wah."

"Huh! So it was those devils? The same gang I left at the foot of the island. But there were no Shawnees with them then. Sis-e-to-wah, did you say? I know the rascal, but never before did I hear of him being bold enough for such a deed. What stirred him to it?"

"There was a white man with them."

"Ah! Now we have the truth—a red-coat?" and his eyes were on my jacket.

"He wore one—stolen no doubt—but was no soldier. Mademoiselle knew the man, a ruffian called Jules Lapin."

He gazed into my face a minute and laughed, slapping his knee in sudden merriment.

"Lord! But that's a good one, boy! By the Lord Harry! 't was a fine joke. But maybe we better move, friend, for he would not be in good humor if he did come, and I am scarcely in better grace with him than you."

"Go where?"

"To join my party. Did yer think it likely I was here alone? I'll tell yer the whole of it in a word. I found the warriors of the Wyandots marching south, an' joined them. Have you heard it was war? Ay! There's no stopping now; the tribes have taken the trail, the tomahawks are bloody. 'T is said St. Clair has left Har-mar, already, and there will be fighting on the Wabash, Pish! It is easy to guess how it will end."

"Where are your Indians?"

"At the foot of the lake. I scouted up the shore as far as the ford; saw the blaze of fire over here and crept up through the woods to investigate. Then somebody fired a gun, and I ran forward. This is what I found."

He waved his hand about the open space.

"Now you understand. I reckon the best thing for us to do is to get out."

I looked down at Brady doubtfully; then stepped over beside him.

"How is he, mademoiselle?" I asked.

"Can he talk at all?"

"If you bend close to his lips you can hear his words," she answered glancing up at my face. The hunter's eyes were bright; he seemed to be trying to speak, and I dropped on my knees beside her.

"What is it, Brady?"

There was a faint muttering, but I distinguished the words.

Yet we reached the spot at last, and stumbled into the circle of light cast by a small fire, the Indians aroused from sleep by Girty's shout, and clustering about us in eager cur-osity. At first view I deemed them hostile, but a word from the girl made them friendly enough.

It was the fourth day, on the banks of the Maumee, that we came straggling into the Indian encampment, and passed through howling hordes, who struck at us in spite of the guards. The word passed that one of the white prisoners was Stephen Brady caused them to press about us so close that we were fairly hummed into the mass, infuriated faces on every side, the wild shrieking making an indescribable din. The situation was becoming serious, for the guards cared little what befell us, when Girty, accompanied by three Wyandot chiefs and a white man in British uniform, fought passage through the crowd, and by threats and blows, won way for us through the village. The extent of this surprised me, and gave me a new conception of the power of those northwest Indian tribes. There were hundreds, perhaps thousands, gathered there, for we only traversed one end of the encampment, the warriors of tribes whose homes were as far away as the great lakes and the big rivers. There were few wigwags erected, not more than two or three standing in the shadow of trees close beside the river. Big as the encampment was, it was no permanent village, but a mere rendezvous for the various tribes allied for war. To one of these, covered with deer skin and rendered hideous by tribal totems, we were taken, and thrust within. At last we were alone, Brady and I, although we could still hear the yelling without. He lay extended on his litter, and I dropped to the ground, thoroughly exhausted from the rough butting through which I had passed.

CHAPTER XXII.

Rene Comes.

The afternoon passed slowly. We discussed the chances of escape, yet knew so little of our surroundings as to gain slight satisfaction. If we could be certain that there were no Indians on the opposite bank of the river we might venture an attempt. But we were far from sure.

Thus far all had been failure, our mission useless, our sufferings vain; Schultz had given up his life, Brady was wounded and suffering, and I, as well as he, a helpless prisoner. Yet even this could be borne with patience if only I could perceive some way to become of ourselves with the men by which I could warn St. Clair of this tornado of savagery about to sweep down upon him.

Slowly, insensibly, the vision of mademoiselle came. What a life had been hers from childhood, and yet how the true, sweet womanhood had conquered all savage environment.

She was in my mind still, a soft, tender memory, when the skin concealing the entrance was lifted and she stood in the narrow opening looking in. I could see her slender, lightly poised form outlined against the fire, but seemingly her eyes could not penetrate the darkness within. An instant she hesitated, leaning slightly forward.

"Monsieur."

"Yes," I said eagerly, already on my feet. "I was longing for you to come."

She came forward cautiously, guided by the sound of my voice, leaving the entrance open, permitting me to glimpse the guard without, facing the opening.

"You have come to help us, mademoiselle?" I whispered, bending so close her hair brushed my lips. "You feel that our need is that desperate?"

"I must do right," she answered, yet without lifting her eyes to mine, "as God tells me. I pray to him for guidance. You are white men and Christians; you came to the Wyandots on a mission of peace. What is my duty, monsieur? I also am a Christian, and only a drop of Indian blood flows in my veins. Yet all my life have I been Indian. How can I turn against my own people?"

"I cannot think that you do," I urged as she paused, breathing heavily. "The Wyandots have been falsely led, deceived. They have been driven into this war by the lies of white men. Would we be in danger now if our fate was left to a council of Wyandot chiefs?"

"No; they would listen to me, and believe. It is Hamilton and his white aides who refuse to hear the story. I went to his tepee twice, and was turned away—the last time with insults, as though I were an unknown squaw."

"How, then, did you gain permission to come here?"

"I waited until he left the camp. There are but two white men here to-night, and one of them is Girty. I like not the man, but he seems friendly to you, and so I trust him. He suggested that I come, and told me something which gave me courage. He had heard a word dropped by Hamilton which made him suspect your lives were at stake. He dare not act openly, but he sent me to tell you this, and to whisper to you his plan. It was easy for me to come here with Hamilton away."

Twice we started at the distant hoot of an owl, but it was not repeated. Then, at last, the signal came, sounding near at hand, from somewhere down the stream, Brady went first, worming his way silently beneath the flap, and the instant he disappeared, I followed. There was a slight gully to our left, and we crept into it, keeping down out of the gleam of fire. Lying side by side at the edge of the water he put his lips close to my ear.

"On your back, lad, with only the nose out; stroke easy, and let the current carry you down."

The guards are Wyandots, and I had only to ask the chief to let me dress Monsieur Brady's wounds. He had not been warned against me, and suspected nothing. The Englishman who was left in command was led by Girty to the other end of the village. When the chief sought him, he was not to be found, and so I was given permission."

She stepped silently back to the entrance, and glanced out into the firelight, returning as swiftly to clasp my sleeve.

"Listen, monsieur; I must speak fast, for I know not who may suspect us. Now mark every word, for 't is a desperate chance. Two hours from now be ready. We must work tonight, while Hamilton is away. I will somehow draw the guard away from this side—here, next to river, monsieur. When you hear an owl hoot three times creep beneath the skins and down the bank to the water's edge. You must move like foxes, for there will be sleeping warriors to pass. Go down stream."

"And then?" I asked breathlessly, as she stopped to glance behind.

"A quarter of a mile below, at the end of the village, around a sharp bend, Girty will have a canoe tied to a tree that overhangs the water. It will be in shadow, and concealed by brush. He has promised to put into it food, paddles and one gun. You must hide during daylight—are you sure you understand all?"

"Yes; that is clear, but I must ask a question—where is St. Clair?"

"I do not know exactly, but he is marching toward the little Wabash; he seeks to destroy the Miami towns."

"With what force?"

"Less than two thousand, the scouts say. He only expects to meet the Indians of the Wabash."

A head was thrust through the flap, and a gruff voice spoke in a strange language. The girl's fingers pressed mine firmly, and then she turned and went out in silence. As she passed out of the opening her hand dropped the skin, leaving the interior in darkness.

I stood motionless, listening to the many sounds without, hardly conscious yet that she had gone. The hot blood was throbbing in my veins, but it was caused by no thought of the dangers confronting me. At that moment she alone occupied my mind. Then slowly her message recurred, forcing its way in upon my consciousness with insistence. Tonight—our escape must be made within two short hours.

I stepped forward to awaken Brady, but now, with my brain cleared, a sudden suspicion came. Was this honest planning? Was the desire back of it actually our escape? Or was it born of treachery? Not for an instant did I question her—the purity and truth of her purpose—but Simon Girty. Why should he scheme to help us? Never before had I heard his name spoken as any harbinger of mercy to the frontier. I recalled his ugly face, his narrow, furtive eyes, and my doubt of him increased. The plan was too easy, too well timed, to be altogether natural.

I shook Brady awake, told him all that had occurred, so far as related to our effort, but without voicing my suspicion.

Twice we started at the distant hoot of an owl, but it was not repeated. Then, at last, the signal came, sounding near at hand, from somewhere down the stream, Brady went first, worming his way silently beneath the flap, and the instant he disappeared, I followed. There was a slight gully to our left, and we crept into it, keeping down out of the gleam of fire. Lying side by side at the edge of the water he put his lips close to my ear.

"On your back, lad, with only the nose out; stroke easy, and let the current carry you down."

DRIVE WHEAT PRICES DOWN IN CHICAGO

After Rise of 9 Cents, Exporters Alarmed Over Possible Tie-Up Or Shipping.

Chicago.—Contrary to all previous experience, wheat prices in the final dealings here were being driven not up but down by prospects that the Austro-Serbian war would spread.

After a rise of 9 cents in thirty minutes, largely on account of bold assertions that the bulk of the surplus crop of the United States, instead of being rushed to Europe, might be held in this country as a result of general war disrupting all ocean trade.

MORGAN ADVISES OWNERS OF U. S. STOCKS TO KEEP THEIR HEADS

New York, July 31.—J. P. Morgan today issued the following statement: "Alarming as the news is from Europe we are still hoping that there will not be a general war. While the gravity of the present situation can hardly be exaggerated there still is the opportunity for the sober second thought of the people of Europe to prevail over their first impulses. If the delicate situation can be held in abeyance for a few days, I should expect a rising tide of protest from the people who are to pay for war with their blood and their property."

"It is a time for the owners of the American securities to keep their heads, to bear in mind that actual properties represented by American securities will not suffer greatly by a European war."

The first wagon load of home grown watermelons from Charleston Bottom were brought in this morning by Jack McNutt and sold to J. C. Cablish & Bro. They are simply delicious. It is said the watermelon crop this season is the best in many years, as too much rain injures the vines.

THE JAP-ENGLAND ALLIANCE

The existing treaty of alliance between Great Britain and Japan, signed in 1905 and renewed in 1911, provides that the two countries shall support each other in the event of an attack or aggressive action against either in Eastern Asia or India by another power. From time to time there have been rumors of secret clauses, greatly extending the scope of the convention, and making it apply to hostilities conducted outside of the Far East, but the existence of any such extra provisions is unknown to the State Department or to the Japanese Embassy at Washington.

Mrs. Darlington E. Fee very beautifully entertained a score or more of her friends yesterday afternoon with a delightful bridge party at her elegant home in West Third street.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

Will Charge Underwood Tariff Bill Has Failure.

Washington, D. C.—That the Underwood tariff bill has proved to be a failure, both as a revenue producer and as a reducer of the high cost of living, will be the contention of Republican aspirants for the House in all sections of the country.

The loss in revenue for the nine months of the last fiscal year, during which it was in force, was $26,000,000, and the loss for the first 25 days of this year amounts to more than $3,200,000, as compared with the same period last year.

Every housewife, it is contended, knows there has not been a reduction in the cost of living, while the farmers are keenly alive to the fact that there has been an increase in the importation of agricultural products.

WAR IN EUROPE AFFECTS TO BACCO MARKET.

(Commercial Tribune.)

The war in Europe it is expected will have a big effect in this country as far as the tobacco market is concerned, and this was the principal topic of conversation yesterday along the tobacco breaks.

Tobacco brokers yesterday in groups, after the sales on the breaks, discussed the war and all were of the opinion that the difficulties in Russia and in Austria would be a boon to the local market.

Little tobacco is raised in the foreign countries where a great deal of tobacco is used. Sales to these countries are great and now that warfare has taken up the time of the residents no tobacco will be cultivated.
